

A short photo impression of the 2018 course

During the course in April 2018 we did among other things, a role play. Here some participants busy with that

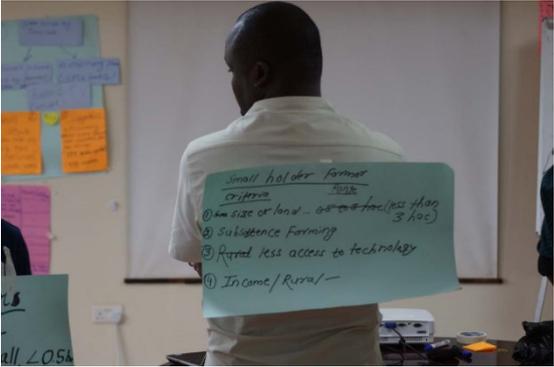

Here are the headlines of the papers during the role play. These headlines, off course influenced ministers and other stakeholders

Off course the course contains many presentations by experts. Here a presentation during a seminar organised within the framework of the course on the campus of Makerere University.

During one of the presentation, accompanied by an exercise, s participants had to imagine the situation of a small-holder farmer.

Participants also has to think about funding and among other things thought about the hypothetical question if they would hand in a proposal for a research call where climate plays a role.

During the excursion we saw that some farmers have a sophisticated set-up of their coffee and banana plantation.

In the rural areas plastic bottles are popular because they can help to adapt to climate change

There was also time for a social excursion. Here a tree full of birds on the banks of the Nile.

Almost at the end of the course, there was the discussion among peers about the personal action plans. These had been prepared based on the various inputs obtained during the course.
