Foreword

Wageningen UR is probably the only Dutch university and research institution with a One World Week to celebrate our international identity and the cultural diversity on its campus. And of course I am very proud of that. With over 100 nationalities Wageningen UR is becoming a true international organisation. Wageningen UR staff and students want to excel in science and to act as global citizens. We aim at understanding not only the scientific issues we are investigating, but also the social and cultural environment that shapes our way of thinking. We are curious to experience other cultures, we respect different approaches and values and we learn from each other. Actually, many worlds come together in Wageningen. Every week should be One World Week, but in the upcoming week we emphasize this. Have a nice week and I hope to meet you all during one or more occasions.

Prof. dr. Arthur Mol, rector magnificus

One World Week 2016

The One World Week is a week in which we celebrate the diversity and international focus in our education and research. This week is aimed at stimulating cooperation and sharing knowledge.

It's a perfect opportunity to learn more about different cultural backgrounds. Grab this chance to interact, connect, have fun and learn from each other to become a world-wise citizen. We have over 50 activities in 1 week concerning international issues; exposure of different cultures, food, fashion, festival, debates concerning global themes, lectures, sports, movies etcetera.

The activities are during lunch time in Orion or Impulse and in the evenings. We also have nice activities during the weekend.

Most of the activities are for free and without registration. If registration is needed, it is shown on the website. This week is organised for all employees and students of Wageningen UR and other interested persons.

International food

The caterers also serve international dishes (at normal costs) during the One World Week:

- European food - Restaurant of the Future
(also 4, 5, 6 April outside: Dutch Taco food truck and good coffee)
- Asian food - Orion
- Latin American food - Forum
- African food - Leeuwenborch
