

Calculate your h-index with Web of Science

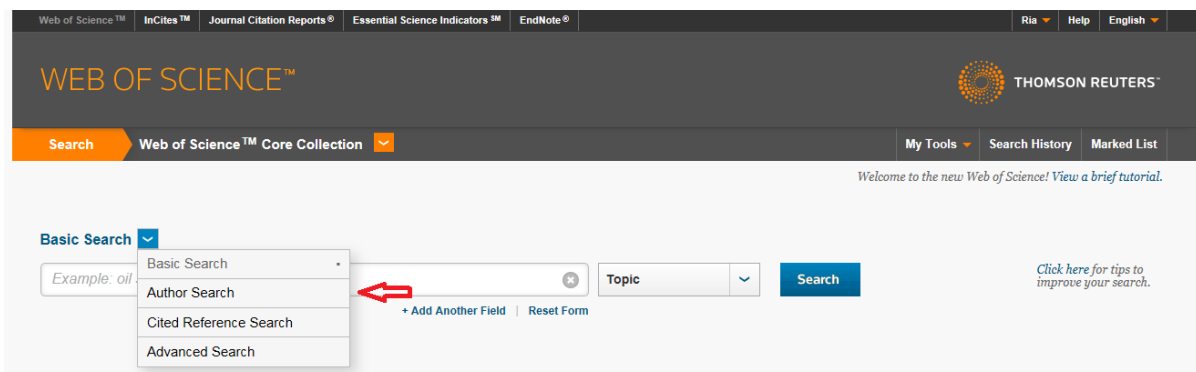

version: 5 October 2015

Already a ReseracherID? You calculate your h-index directly at <http://www.researcherid.com>. Otherwise follow this instruction.

1. Go back to the Web of Science and select the Web of Science™ Core Collection.

2. Start an Author Search.

3. Enter your last name and initials as shown in the search box. You can also add Author name variants by clicking on 'Add Author Name Variants'. When you want to search only for exact matches tick the box 'Exact Matches Only'. Continue with 'Select Research Domain'.
4. Select relevant research domains only when you expect too many authors with identical names. Continue with 'Select organization'.
5. Select the relevant organization or organizations. Think of all spelling variations of your affiliation(s) and finish your search.
6. Your search will results in a list of publications. These results may be included in different record sets. You can check the whole list of publications or use the record sets. By clicking on the link you can see the different records.

A record set is a set of publications automatically grouped by Web of Science based on author, subject and affiliation.
