Exemptions English language proficiency

In some cases you can be exempted from submitting an English proficiency test. Please see below if you are exempted and please read the requirements carefully.

When you do not meet one of the exemptions below, you need to submit sufficient result of an English proficiency test as per the requirements.

1. Applicants who have completed their Bachelor or Master degree in one of the countries mentioned below are exempted from submitting an English proficiency test:
   - Australia
   - Ireland
   - Canada (except universities in Quebec)
   - New Zealand
   - The United Kingdom
   - The United States of America

2. Applicants who have completed a bachelor at a Dutch university (WO) are exempted from submitting an English Proficiency test.

3. Applicants who have completed a fully English taught Bachelor at a Dutch university of applied sciences (HBO) are exempted from submitting an English Proficiency test. They are required to upload a signed statement from their institution that the medium of instruction during the complete Bachelor’s programme they followed was English.

4. Nationals who are on the country list (see below) who have completed their Bachelor or Master degree in their home country are encouraged to submit a sufficient result of an English proficiency test. If this is not possible, a signed statement from the university that the medium of instruction during the complete Bachelor’s programme they followed was English is required.
